Investing in People, Changing Perspectives

About The Course

People with learning disabilities face the same nutrition & health related problems as the rest of the population. There is much more information on healthy eating available today, but many people with learning disabilities cannot read the information or have difficulty in understanding to make informed choices.

This course has been designed to provide those who care and support people with learning disabilities with a greater understanding of this area and current issues, improve practises and provide practical information which can be implemented.

Who Should Attend

This course should be of interest to caterers who supply meals for people with learning disabilities, those working in health and social care support settings, staff working in schools and nurseries, voluntary and charity organisations. Others with an interest are welcome to attend.

About Your Tutors

Our tutors are highly qualified, skilled and extremely knowledgeable and most importantly have the ability to pass on their knowledge to provide you with a highly interactive, stimulating and enjoyable day.

Dr Catherine Hankey is a State Registered Dietitian and Senior Lecturer in Human Nutrition, University of Glasgow and her interest is in the dietary management of disease, particularly obesity. She has carried out extensive research in these areas and is currently working on a project on the adaption of weight management approaches to those with intellectual disabilities.

Dr Laura Stewart has a long standing interest in obesity (both adult and childhood). Through her work with the Children's Weight Clinic (CWC) she has provided training in obesity across the UK and beyond. She is also the Team Lead for Paediatric Overweight Service Tayside, NHS Tayside. Laura worked in Lothian with adults with learning disability for 9 years based at Gogarburn Hospital and then with children with special needs for 10 years based at the Sick Kids Hospital, Edinburgh.
