Jim Taylor:
knows autism

It is estimated more than 1 in 100 in the population have autism and we know this can lead to difficulties with communication, social interaction and learning. More children and young people with autism are being educated in main stream settings bringing their own unique challenges. This course has been designed to increase your understanding, skills and expertise in supporting children and young people with autism in school and further education settings - So You Can Make A Real Difference.

The programme is packed with ideas, inspiration and best practice. To make your learning informative as well as enjoyable the programme has been broken up with a mix of presentation, scenarios, case studies and discussion.

The programme will focus on: -

- Providing information and knowledge informed by a contemporary understanding of autism and its impact on learning in school settings.
- Sharing evidence based strategies and best practice for teaching children and young people with autism in education settings.
- Adapting teaching approaches and styles to meet the different learning styles of pupils with ASD.
- Making the curriculum accessible to pupils with autism.
- Adapting the environment of the classroom and the school to support the learning for pupils.
- Developing strategies to strengthen social relationships.
- Making inclusion work.
- The Whole School Approach – Creating an 'autism friendly' environment and culture within education environments.
- What makes a 'Specialist' service/class/teacher.

About your tutor – Jim Taylor, consultant in Autism

Jim is the director of “knows autism” and an experienced professional in Autism having worked in the field for over 35 years. Currently an Independent Consultant in Autism, he was formerly Director of Education, Scottish Autism, his remit included New Struan House School, A Centre for Autism. Jim is currently involved in a number of new projects around the UK and Ireland, he is the Chair of the NAS Accreditation Standards Body, serves on a number of UK-wide strategy groups and a Board member of Nordoff Robbins Music Therapy Scotland.
