

Helping Children and Young People with ADHD Succeed in Education Settings

MEDICACPD

A Half Day Training Course Wednesday 21st March 2018, Glasgow

This course will provide educators with a knowledge update and better understanding of ADHD and how it affects children and young people in the education setting. As well as plenty of practical strategies which can be put to immediate effect in the classroom, so you can help students with ADHD compensate for their problems and achieve their full potential.

Course Tutor Bill Colley

*Independent Educational Consultant -
Specialising in Additional Support Needs (ASN).*

Bill is a writer, teacher trainer, educational consultant and a recognised expert on ADHD with a real passion for the subject matter which is clearly demonstrated when he teaches. He spent much of his career in the independent sector before becoming the headmaster of residential special school. Bill contributes at a local level to an ADHD support group, the NHS Autism Assessment Pathway, and to the National Autism Strategy Reference Group (Scotland) and is also an advisor to Mindroom charity.

Course Content

ADHD Update: Highlights changes in scientific understanding of ADHD & discusses the implications for education.

ADHD in Education: Provides a summary of possible deleterious effects of ADHD on academic learning (reading, writing, arithmetic) and social-emotional functioning across the primary, secondary, and post-secondary years

Post:

- In the UK in every class of 30, one child/young person or more will have Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder (ADHD)
- In the UK some children with ADHD still go unrecognised and untreated.
- ADHD can cause significant disruption to children's lives at home and school. They are at higher risk for academic underachievement or failure despite having average or above average intellectual abilities.
- For Educators there are many daily challenges trying to teach these students along with the rest of the class.

Who Should Attend?
